AGNES KUSCHEE

Agnes Kuschee is featured in a portrait with long, wavy, light brown hair, wearing a black lace top. The background is a soft-focus sunset or sunrise sky. In the bottom right corner, three John Frieda Frizz Ease hair products are displayed: a jar of 'miraculous recovery deep conditioner' and two tubes of 'miraculous recovery' (one labeled 'SHAMPOO' and the other 'CONDITIONER').

INVISIBLE? I don't think so!

Life in the background isn't an option for the 50-plus women who love living on their terms

Cindy Crawford, Lorraine Kelly, Davina McCall... have you noticed how it's the truly grown-up women we're all talking about now? Hitting 40, 50 – and beyond – is no longer seen as a barrier to female success. Known as Generation Y-Not, this age group is enjoying more freedom than ever before. Both in and out of the spotlight, women are finally being defined by their achievements, not just age – something men have long been used to.

So why is being a 2016 Generation Y-Not woman so great? Well, we are one of the most powerful consumer groups in Britain – we're financially independent, having grown up working for our own money, and we enjoy spending it as we wish. Timing's crucial too – if we've raised a family and the kids have flown the nest, now's the time to pursue our own goals. A refusal to view the middle years as a time of boredom means many of us are starting businesses, increasing our fitness or finding love again.

Remind yourself of all you have achieved in the past and embrace the future with sassy confidence

Lorraine Kelly, 56, says she feels 'liberated' by her age, supermodel Cindy Crawford turned 50 this year and her business interests go from strength to strength, while Davina McCall, 48, describes this life stage as 'powerful'.

As we're all likely to be working longer, we deserve to reap the rewards and truly relish the confidence which comes with age. As 50-year-old Net-a-Porter founder Natalie Massenet puts it: 'My ambition is still the same: to be creative, to be modern, to stay one step ahead and to enjoy life.'

Sounds like the perfect blueprint to us!
